

Erno Vandeweert

received his Ph.D. in Physics in 1997 from the Katholieke Universiteit Leuven, Belgium. He worked as a Fulbright-Hays Research Fellow at the Pennsylvania State University before returning to Belgium. After 15 years of active research in solid-state physics and nanoscience, he joined the European Commission in 2005 where he currently is a Programme Officer focused on value-added materials for energy applications.

